DEMOLITION BEGINS — Phil's Home Hardware Store was reduced to a pile of rubble as demolition began on Thursday. Fire destroyed the building on July 27. According to the fire marshall investigating it, the fire started in the small open space between a stock room and the store itself. The hardware store will be rebuilt and open for business in the near future, according to Mrs. Vicky Sheplaury.

There's money to be had for your homemade products

By Richard Wright

St. Paul Journal

A small but interested group of people spent two hours in Elk Point on Wednesday trying to bring together ideas that would reveal their secret recipes for profit.

George Rife of the B.C.D.C. led the dozen or so people through a small workshop, trying to establish a base for a food processing industry for Northeastern Alberta. The idea is to give people another avenue of making a profit from their kitchens or community facilities.

"There is a need," says Rife. "There is a demand for the products we can produce from the raw materials we have in our area. We see that there is an opportunity here if the local people want to make something happen," he added.

Rife used the groups input to establish business plans, marketing strategies, ways to create capital gains, production sharing and distribution methods.

Over the past two years the B.C.D.C. has been conducting these workshops throughout the northeast and has found that in many cases people have a product to sell but don't have enough knowledge or desire to do it.

"We want to know what sort of project people want to get involved in and what is holding them back."

While provincial regulations are tight concerning the usage of private kitchens for commercial use, there are ways to get around that. Taking the initiative and building a kitchen acceptable to government standards is one. The other is to use government-approved community facilities such as town halls and community centres which are often open for public use.

"Every community probably has one community kitchen that has been inspected," says Rife. "Those kitchens are not in use 80 per cent of the time."

Sharing methods can be used to cut down costs. For instance, a person may be interested in marketing cookies. While they have no way to package a distribute the material another person just might. Instead of using large firms for packaging and distribution, the cookie maker can use the person down the street who is interested in that and both can make a profit.

There's money to be had for your homemade products

The lack of finances is always a problem, especially for the common producer of baked goods. There are ways to get around this as well, noted Rife.

"There are many sources of money to assist you," he says.

There are matching grants where the province will match you monetary input. There are, of course, bank loans and if you are between the ages of 18 and 25 there is a Western Youth Entrepreneur grant of $10,000 available through Community Futures.

Basically, Rife says, money is there to be made if the initiative is shown. He advises to research your product, research the markets, and if there is desire for your product spread it outside the area to reach even further consumers.

The panel agreed, that in these preliminary steps, it would be a good idea to have a regional conference to discuss ideas and possible sharing methods with other communities. No date has been set. St. Paulites also had a chance to get in on the workshop. One was held here on Monday.

From the FCSS desk...

Back to School - Soon!

Our summer is almost over and our young children are looking forward to going back to school! I am sure many moms and dads are looking forward to that day for their kids as well.

It seems to a young person going back to school, he/she needs to get their parents involved in the preparation by letting their parents know they need new clothes or supplies. Parents are usually able to help with this assignment from the children. It seems that preparation for education and education of the individual, involves more than the person themselves.

Several years ago, a Mr. E. Torgunrud, the Associate Director of the Department of Education spoke at length about priorities in Education. He gave careful coverage to the importance of materials, methodology, organization and evaluation in teaching. He spoke of techniques and activities and the features which can be planned and controlled, — but he also said that all of these are secondary. Most important of all, Mr. Torgunrud suggested, is the personality of the teacher, and the interest of the student. A teacher just doesn't pour learning into a child by covering the material or following the lesson plan — that is schooling. And of course Mark Twain made it clear a long while ago that he never confused his schooling with education. Rather we teach by the kind of persons we are. If we love learning, if we are inventive and outgoing, if we follow the lead in the interest the child himself provides to effect a purpose, if we are real persons and relate to what is real in others, if we are teaching and learning and helping others to do likewise then we are involved in education.

In other words, once a person is in school, it is really important if "schooling" or "education" takes place, by the personality of the teacher and the interest of the student. Two important components.

Another point I picked up from this talk, was the component of being inventive and outgoing — there will be results. Learning will take place.

Kathryn C. Mertz relates the following example: "There was once a man who had an idea that India rubber could be made useful. People laughed at him, but for eleven years he struggled with hardships to make his dream come true. He pawned his clothing and the family jewels to buy food for his children. His neighbors called him insane. But he still insisted that India rubber could be made of practical use. The man was Charles Goodyear. Dreams do come true — if you make them."

To all of you going back to school — students or teachers — may schooling turn to education for both of you and we wish you all the best in the days ahead.

Spectacular skies in August

Just a reminder yet that Jupiter is still very visible, in the south now, at sunset. Next month I'll have some information regarding a comet soon to be visible above Jupiter.

What's news at the library?

Camping out - at the library

Nineteen children and one (slightly demented) librarian camped out at the library on August 14. We watched movies, played computer games and managed to carpet the library in popcorn before we were through. Several kids managed to stay up all night while a few were asleep by midnight and not heard from until morning.

The night started out with a hotdog sale at the library. Thanks go out to Mike and Tracy Metz who not only contributed their barbecue but helped out with the hotdogs; Doug and Connie Olstad who also donated the use of their barbecue; Susan Frisby who went above and beyond the call of duty, helping out at the barbecue and staying until after midnight at the camp out; Mae Hendrickson who went for more food when we ran out; and the Elk Point Co-op for their donation of wieners.

Thanks also go out to the Golden Loaf Bakery and Tags who donated muffins, doughnuts, etc. ... for breakfast after the campout, Hometown Grocers for the movie rentals, Min and Don Kim at the Tempo station for the microwave popcorn and all the parents who trusted me with their children for a night.

The evening continued with storyteller Merle Harris who kept the sixty-plus crowd enthralled and delighted with her tales. Afterwards, Northern Lights distributed bookmarks to all the kids present and the library presented Merle with her own CAMP READSALOT T-shirt complete with the title "Storyteller" on the back.

Congratulations go out to Cathy Olstad who won the raffle we held at the barbecue. Her prize consisted of a CAMP READSALOT T-shirt and cap, a pop-up book about bugs, a travel game and a backpack to carry it all.

Finally, here are few more juvenile books newly arrived at the library:

Three new titles in the popular Goosebumps series. In Say Cheese and Die ... Again!, Greg digs up the camera that caused all the trouble in the first place and trouble begins all over again. In Ghost Camp, the pranks and jokes at Camp Spirit Moon get a little weird. In The Beast from the East, Ginger and her brothers get lost in the woods and encounter some strange beasts that like to play games where the losers get eaten.

Adam and his friends come across a friendly black cat who follows them back to town and appears to have strange powers in The Wicked Cat from Spooksville.

The Baker Street Brigade Investigate a priceless and mysterious jewelled peacock which may or may not be cursed in The Jewelled Peacock of Persia by Jake and Luke Thoene, the third book in the Baker Street Mysteries.

Paula suspects that her new friend Sukey is living in an old Chevy and wants to help her out in The Pickle Song by Barthe DeClements, a nominee for last year's Young Reader's Choice Award.

LIBRARY CALENDAR:
Friday, September 6, 1996 —
